Loading games and Resource Packs

The only reason when a game would not load is if you had custom created the game. This just means that the format of the file is not recognised by the software and that something must be wrong in it. A template for creating custom game-states can be found in the GitHub page (at the bottom of this under More Information).

Resource packs will most often not load if they are not resource packs. The resource pack must have every icon for the game inside it and it is possible for folders which are not in the correct format to end up in that folder and therefore not work.

FAQ

Q: Where do I put my own saves which I have created?

A: In the "/saves" folder in the directory of the game.

Q: Where do I put my own resource packs which I have created?

A: In the "/data/resource packs" directory.

Q: Can I create my own sound effects?

A: Yes. But they have to replace the existing ones in the "/data/audio" directory.

Q: How do I download an older version of the game?

A: On the GitHub page, you can go to "Releases" and download a past release of the game.

Q: How do I see what is happening during the game?

A: Watch the notifications that appear in the scrolling text box on the far right.

Q: Can I copy the game and use it myself?

A: As stated in the license, you can as long as you attach the original license and keep all of your code open-source.

Q: Is there a game wiki?

A: Not at the moment. Apart of the Quick Start Guide and the in-game tutorial, there are no other tutorial-type resources.

Q: Is there an official place where I can publish my custom game-state?

A: Not at the moment. Feel free to start one yourself.

Q: How do I avoid striking at the same time as the enemy and dealing no damage?

A: Watch the enemy's preparedness to find out when they will strike, and wait instead of striking that turn.
